Dear Chuck,

I have three easy questions for you...

How much of your time is spent "fighting fires?"
How much time do you waste fighting the same fire over and over again, never eliminating the root of the problem?
When will you finally say, "Enough is enough!"?

FACT: Real fire-fighters spend less than 2% of their time actually fighting flames. The rest of their time is spent on planning, preparation and training.

Gut-check

In a tough economy, lots of businesses try to save money by eliminating training. Those who see the opportunity take another path by continuing or even increasing their training efforts. Why? They know it pays huge dividends in morale, skill development and profits!

When you train during tough times:

Your team knows you're in it for the long haul.
You create a gap between you and your competition.
Your people are sharper and more productive!

Take charge now!

Don't wait until you hear the alarms going off in your business. Call or email me today. Let's talk about your goals, your team and how to keep the flames of tough times away from your door.

Call me today at 304-757-8125 so we sit down and discuss your goals for 2010.

Sincerely,

Chuck
